ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Card games for two or more players using a deck of cards having a common theme are disclosed. Each card of the deck is printed on one side with a different image of a person or thing that is a member of a class of items related to the theme of the game. Players score by comparing cards from each player's hand and subjectively deciding which cards prevail in a round of cards. The decision as to the best card is determined by agreement of a majority of players. If a majority of players cannot agree, a neutral ~~non~~ players nonplayer may be consulted to subjectively decide the best card for a round. If a neutral ~~non~~ nonplayer cannot decide or is not available, the players resort to an ~~alternate~~ alternative basis for determining the winner of an undecided round. Additional aspects of game play may be decided by using textual information printed on the cards.
